A SPECIAL BARGAIN

- FOR -

NEWSPAPER READERS.

The Twice-a-Week Republic
 and
KENTUCKIAN
BOTH ONE YEAR, $2.25.

It is scarcely necessary to call attention to the superior merits of The Twice-a-Week edition of The St. Louis Republic as a newspaper.

It has so many advantages as a news gatherer, that no other paper can claim to be its equal. The whole field of news is covered thoroughly. The special features and illustrations are always the best. More noted writers contribute to its columns than to any other paper of its class. It is published especially to meet the wants of that large class of readers who have not the opportunity or can not afford to read a daily paper.

It is the leading Democratic paper of the Mississippi Valley and the South and West. By a special arrangement made for a limited time only, our friends will be given an opportunity to take advantage of this liberal proposition.

Remember the offer, The Twice-a-Week Republic, 16 pages a week, and the Kentuckian, both one year for only $2.25.

WANTED THE COUPON.

Lady Who Had Purchased Ten Cents Worth of Postage Stamps.

Many of Manchester's merchants are giving trading coupons to the amount of ten cents or more, which possess a value when one has acquired a certain number. The merchant, of course, has to pay for the coupons, and they are given out as a matter of advertising. A most amusing incident occurred Saturday evening in a store on Elm street, not a thousand miles from the Weston & Fitts block. A lady walked into the store and asked for five 2-cent stamps. It took all there was in the store, but the proprietor wished to please the lady. She took the stamps, handed the proprietor ten cents, thanked him, and waited.

"Is there something else, madam?" queried the proprietor.

"Oh, no," replied the lady, "that is, nothing that I wish to buy." And still she waited.

"You gave me the correct change for the stamps, did you not, madam?" asked the proprietor, noticing she still lingered.

"Yes, sir," replied the lady.

"And you are sure there's nothing else you wanted?"

"Well, I noticed that you gave trading coupons here, and, as I have bought ten cents' worth of stamps, I am waiting for a coupon."

The proprietor is slowly recovering. —Manchester Union.

A WONDERFUL CLOCK.

Westminster Timekeeper Varies Only a Second Per Week.

The great Westminster clock is said by experts to be the best tower clock in existence, says the Philadelphia Ledger. The astronomer royal in 1844 laid down the condition for the Westminster clock that it should not vary more than a second a day, and the best clockmaker in London would not attempt to construct it under those terms. The result of a long dispute between the astronomer royal, the architect, the government, the house of parliament and the clockmakers of London, which ended, in 1854, in the employment of the late E. J. Dent and his successor, F. Dent, who built the clock under the design and superintendence of the astronomer royal, Edmund Dennison, afterward Sir E. Beckett and now Lord Grimthorpe. The clock was placed in the tower in 1859, and has been running continuously and satisfactorily ever since. It was unfavorably criticised and compared by some of the old-style clockmakers to a mangle, because of its length and apparent rough construction. Its success, however, revolutionized that branch of the trade. The great change consisted of the introduction of a gravity escapement in place of what is known as a dead escapement. The weight required to run it is 160 pounds, of which nine-tenths is required to overcome the friction.

The hands are 11 feet in length and the minute hand is counterbalanced so as to make its total length 14 feet. More trouble is likely to arise from the length of the hands than from any other part of the apparatus. Supported only at one point (on the arbor) the wind gets a strong leverage and tends to loosen them and even change the movement of the clock. Snow and ice lodging on the hands during the sleet storms also act to retard the movement during the last half of an hour and accelerate it during the first half. The minute hand of the Westminster clock is made as light as possible of two copper tubes put together, and weighs 28 pounds. There is but one clock in the world with a larger dial, and that is in the Mechlin church, and is 40 feet in diameter. It has no minute hand, however, and the entire mechanism is, therefore, much simplified.

The Westminster clock reports itself twice a day, by an electrical appliance, to the Greenwich observatory. Its rate is recorded and the results are published in the annual report of the astronomer royal. From this record it appears that the average rate of variation of the clock is less than a second a week. It is subject to abnormal disturbances from thunderstorms, which sometimes amount to seven or eight seconds, but these variations are easily distinguished. The cost of this remarkable clock was about $20,000; the chime of bells nearly $30,000. The bell frame, which is of wrought iron plates, and the dials and hands provided by the architect, cost $58,000. The height of the clock above the pavement is 175 feet. It is a curious circumstance that the accessories of the clock cost more than four times as much as the clock itself.

MADE MONEY EASILY.

A Draft on the Sultan That Was Unexpectedly Honored.

A certain speculator had need of a large sum of money for his operations, and found himself with a very small balance in the bank. He consulted a friend as to how he could get over the emergency. The friend suggested that he should draw on somebody in another city. The operator said he knew no one that owed him, and the friend insisted that that would make no difference if the draft did not return too soon.

The operator reflected a time and then wrote out a draft on the sultan of Turkey for £2,000 and deposited it in the bank. The draft came into the hands of the Rothschilds, who forwarded it to Constantinople, and it was duly presented to the sultan's chamberlain.

"Who is this man?" asked the chamberlain of the sultan's treasurer. "Don't know him," replied the treasurer.

"Do we owe him anything?" asked the chamberlain.

"No," replied the other.

"Then do not pay it," decided the chamberlain.

"But if I might advise," said the crafty treasurer, "this draft comes through the Rothschilds, with whom we are negotiating a loan. Would it be safe, under the circumstances, to dishonor it?"

"Pay it," said the sultan's chamberlain, and so the speculator was £2,000 richer than he knew, to his own great astonishment. —Weekly Telegraph.

Here Is True Economy.

Shoreditch has just inaugurated an electric lighting system of a novel kind. The steam for the engine to drive the dynamo is being generated by the burning in specially-constructed furnaces of the dust and refuse of the parish which formerly cost the local authority a considerable sum to get rid of.

IGNORANCE in regard to paint materials or painting would seem in this age to be inexcusable, when full information can be had free. If interested, it will pay to get pamphlet and color cards, also twelve pictures of houses painted in different shades or combinations of colors, free. Send your address.
